CLAIMS

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1, 4, 6-9, 12, 14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Kubo et al. (JP 4-281629).

Regarding claim 1, Kubo shows:

A product cover having two parts (1-2) coupled by an elastic joint (15);

A low mass actuator (i.e. 36) coupled between the two parts (1-2), responsive to an actuation signal, for vibrating the two parts (1-2) of the product cover in relation to one another.

Regarding claim 8, Kubo shows:

A product cover having two parts (1-2);

An actuation motor (i.e. 36) coupled between the two parts (1-2), responsive to an actuation signal, for vibrating the two parts (1-2) of the product cover in relation to one another.

Regarding claims 4, 6-7, 9, 12, 14, Kubo shows:

The mobile phone (fig. 2);

The elastic join (15);

A battery (phone battery) for powering the actuator motor.

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 3, 5, 11, 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kubo.

Regarding claims 3, 5, 11 and 13, Kubo shows the actuation motor (36).

Kubo differs from the claimed invention in that it does not explicitly mention that it is a linear actuator which also moves the parts in a range of about 5-15 microns.

However, such linear actuator is well known in the art as admitted by applicant (see pages 6-7 in applicant's specification), since such actuator is well known, then its movement in the range of 5-15 microns should also be viewed as a well known range. Therefore, if it is found that Kubo is not using such actuator, then it would have been obvious for one of ordinary skill in the art to substitute Kubo's actuator with this well known actuator, as long as the basic concept of providing such actuator in such environment is substantially unchanged.

5. Claims 2 and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kubo in view of Nishiyama (JP 6-152459).

Regarding claims 2 and 10, Kubo shows the elastic joint (hinge 15).

Kubo differs from the claimed invention in that it does not show an adhesive layer.

However, it is commonly seen that hinge having an adhesive layer. This is taught by Nishiyama (see flexible material 7).

Hence, it would have been obvious for one of ordinary skill in the art to modify Kubo's hinge with an adhesive layer on the hinge as taught by Nishiyama, such that to strength and protect the hinge area.
